Investigation of Macrosiphini in Belarus started in the 1900s. However, a regional checklist of Macrosiphini has not been published yet. Based on material preserved in our collections and data scattered across publications, we have compiled the first comprehensive list of Macrosiphini recorded from Belarus and briefly analysed it from the geographical and ecological points of view. The list includes 52 genera, 156 species and 2 subspecies. Acyrtosiphon cyparissiae (Koch, 1855), A. euphorbiae Börner, 1949, Diuraphis (Holcaphis) frequens (Walker, 1848), Dysaphis angelicae (Koch, 1854), D. apiifolia petroselini (Börner, 1950), D. lauberti (Börner, 1940), Paramyzus heraclei Börner, 1933, Macrosiphum melampyri Mordvilko, 1919, and Uroleucon pulicariae (Hille Ris Lambers, 1939) are recorded from Belarus for the first time. The recorded diversity is lower than in the adjacent countries – Poland and Latvia. In accordance with the global pattern of aphid relations with their host plants, the majority of Belarusian Macrosiphini species permanently inhabit herbaceous plants (monoecious species) or migrate to them from woody plants (dioecious species). Among the recorded species, 27 inhabit a single host plant species, 85 – plants of a single genus, 37 – plants of a single family, and only seven species inhabit host plants of several families or more. At least 16 species (10% of local fauna of Macrosiphini) are alien to Belarus.

Исследования фауны тлей трибы Macrosiphini в Белоруссии были начаты еще в первые десятилетия XX-го века, однако до настоящего времени ни одного регионального списка видов Macrosiphini не было опубликовано. Целью данной работы было объединение и критическая оценка сведений о Macrosiphini Белоруссии имеющих в разрозненных публикациях, которые были дополнены данными полученными на основании изучения коллекционных материалов. Это позволило впервые получить аннотированный список видов трибы Macrosiphini обитающих в Белоруссии и провести краткий анализ географических и экологических особенностей фауны Macrosiphini Белоруссии. Список включает 52 родов, 156 видов и 2 подвида. Впервые для Белоруссии отмечены Acyrtosiphon cyparissiae (Koch, 1855), A. euphorbiae Börner, 1949, Diuraphis (Holcaphis) frequens (Walker, 1848), Dysaphis angelicae (Koch, 1854), D. apiifolia petroselini (Börner, 1950), D. lauberti (Börner, 1940), Paramyzus heraclei Börner, 1933, Macrosiphum melampyri Mordvilko, 1919, Uroleucon pulicariae (Hille Ris Lambers, 1939). Выявленное число видов трибы на территории Белоруссии оказалось меньше, чем в соседних странах – Польше и Латвии. Большинство видов Macrosiphini, обитающих в Белоруссии, постоянно живет на травянистых растениях (однодомные виды) или мигрирует на них с древесных растений (двудомные виды). Среди отмеченных видов 27 питается на одном виде растения-хозяина, 85 – на хозяевах из одного рода, 37 – на хозяевах из одного семейства и только семь видов используют растений-хозяев из нескольких семейств. По крайней мере, 16 видов (10% местной фауны Macrosiphini) являются чужеродными для фауны Белоруссии.

INTRODUCTION

Belarus, a small (207 600 km<sup>2</sup>) land-locked Central European country (Fig. 1), is situated in the transitional zone between the European deciduous forests and the North Eurasian evergreen coniferous forests. The country is divided (Fig. 2) into five geographical provinces (Martsinkevich & Pirozhnik, 2007).

Study of Belarusian aphids started in the late 1900s, when A.K. Mordvilko collected aphids in the central and southern parts of Eastern Belarus. He listed 28 aphid species, including two species of Macrosiphini (Mordvilko, 1930). At the same time several cecidological papers reported cecidia-forming aphids in Western Belarus (territory of Poland at that time). Four species of Macrosiphini were recorded by Z. Fiedorowiczówna (1930), and two species, by J. Perepeczko-Baumanowa (1934).

After the 1940s, aphidological researches were focused on the field of applied entomology. The following species of Macrosiphini were noted as pests of cultivated plants: Anuraphis subterranea (Walker, 1852), Dysaphis devectora (Walker, 1849), Myzus cerasi (Fabricius, 1775), Phorodon humuli (Schrank, 1801) in orchards (Bezdenko, 1958); Macrosiphum rosae (Linnaeus, 1758) damaging roses in ornamental plantings (Losinskaya, 1960); Brachycaudus helichrysi (Kaltenbach, 1843), B. spiraeae Börner, 1932, Cryptomyzus ribis (Linnaeus, 1758), Dysaphis crataegi (Kaltenbach, 1843), D. (Pomaphis) sorbi (Kaltenbach, 1843), Liosomaphis berberidis (Kaltenbach, 1843), Rhopalomyzus (Judenkoa) lonicerae (Siebold, 1839) as pests of ornamental trees and shrubs (Gorlenko & Pan'ko, 1967, 1972; Pan'ko, 1969); Metopolophium dirhodum (Walker, 1849), Sitobion avenae (Fabricius, 1775) as pests of cereals (Mormyljova, 1981); Myzus (Nectaro- siphon persicae (Šulzer, 1776), Aulacorthum solani (Kaltenbach, 1843), Macrosiphum euphorbiae (Thomas, 1878) as vectors of potato viruses (Zhukova, 1986).

Systematic study of the aphid fauna started in Belarus in the 1980s. Till now several papers on the local faunas of Belarusian regions have been published (Buga, 1989, 1995; Buga et al., 2008; Rakauskas & Buga, 2010; Stekolshchikov & Buga, 2006; Stekolshchikov et al., 2008, 2010); special attention was paid to species damaging woody plants (Buga, 1997, 2001; Buga & Gorlenka, 1987; Buga & Stekolshchikov, 2009). However, a general regional checklist of Macrosiphini has not been published yet.

In the present paper we provide a critical evaluation of integrated information on Macrosiphini of Belarus, based on scattered notes in numerous publications (most of which appeared in obscure regional journals hardly available to foreign scientists) and collections.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

The paper is based on the material collected by S.V. Buga since 1983. Although this information had been partly published in Russian or Belarusian, we prefer to repeat the collection data in English in the list below. We also list the material collected by Yu.V. Safonova, V.E. Jarigo, I.P. Moskvina, A.A. Mityanin, A.A. Ponomarev, D.L. Petrov, N.V. Leshchinskaya, R. Rakauskas, L.A. Serbina, N.V. Voronova, O.L. Nesterova, as well as material preserved in the collection of the Zoological Institute (St Petersburg, Russia).

Microscope slides were prepared using Faure-Berlese mounting fluid or Canada balsam (Blackman & Eastop, 2000). The material is deposited at the Department of Zoology of Belarusian State University (Minsk, Belarus), at the Zoological Institute (St Petersburg, Russia) and at the Department of Zoology of Vilnius University (Vilnius, Lithuania). Data extracted from publications are given in a uniform manner but the completeness of the data depends on the original publications. When different variants of transliteration of geographical names are more or less widely used in the literature we provide the additional variants in parentheses after the main variant. Aphid synonymy follows Remaudière and Remaudière (1997) with subsequent additions (Blackman & Eastop, 2011; Eastop & Blackman, 2005; Holman, 2009). Host plants were identified following Parfenov (1999).

Abbreviations. Aphid's morphs: al. – alate viviparous female, apt. – apterous viviparous female, em. – emigrant, fund. – fundatrix, gyn. – gynopara, ovip. fem. – oviparous female. Localities: BBR – Berezina Biosphere Reserve, BPF – Belovezha Primeval Forest, CBG – Central Botanical Gardens of the National Academy of Science of Belarus, NBR – Naliboki Biological Reserve (Fig. 1), RWS – railway station.

any (Oshmjany), 1 Sept. 1932, Crataegus sp. (as Myzus oxyacanthae Koch and Anuraphis ranunculi Kalf.) (Perepeczko-Baumanowa, 1934).

Fiedorowiczówna (1930) recorded Anuraphis ranunculi Kalf. and Myzus oxyacanthae Koch from Vitebsk Prov.: Sharkovshchina (Szarkowuszczyna) Distr., Bazylpol, 19 July 1924, Pyrus communis L. (Fiedorowiczówna, 1930); Bazylpol, 23 July 1924, Crataegus monogyna Jacq. (Fiedorowiczówna, 1930); vill. Radyuki, 11 Aug. 1924, Crataegus sp. (Fiedorowiczówna, 1930). However, D. ranunculi is a dioecious species, which under the condition of Belarus completes its migration from primary to secondary host by the end of June; therefore the probability of finding this species in July and in the first half of August on Crataegus, and even more so on Pyrus (not a host plant) is rather small. Apparently in this case we have some other species of aphids reported under these names.

DISCUSSION

Two species earlier reported from Belarus were excluded from the list: Dysaphis flava Shaposhnikov, 1952 and D. crataegi (Kaltenbach, 1843). Dysaphis flava was first mentioned by Buga (2001) with reference to Shaposhnikov (1964); however, re-examination of the cited publication revealed that Shaposhnikov (1964) did not record this species directly in Belarus. The second species was reported by Gorlenko & Pan'ko (1972) but, in our opinion, this was a case of misidentification because the cited authors did not use appropriate methods to distinguish these species from morphologically similar ones.

Now 156 species and 2 subspecies of Macrosiphini (belonging to 52 genera) are recorded in Belarus. Acyrtosiphon cyparissiae (Koch, 1855), A. euphorbiae Börner, 1949, Diuraphis (Holcaphis) frequens (Walker, 1848), Dysaphis angelicae (Koch, 1854), D. apiifolia petroselinii (Börner, 1950), D. lauberti (Börner, 1940), Paramyzus heraclei Börner, 1933, Macrosiphum melampyri Mordvilko, 1919, Uroleucon pulicariae (Hille Ris Lambers, 1939) are recorded in Belarus for the first time. The taxonomic diversity is not so rich in comparison with that in the adjacent countries – Latvia (174 species, 61 genera (Rupais, 1989)) and Poland (317 species, 83 genera (Osiaclacz & Halaj, 2009)). One of the reasons behind the smaller number of species recorded from Belarus is the absence of the seashore habitats, from which several stenotopic species were recorded in both Latvia and Poland (including in particular Megoura littoralis F.P. Müller, 1972). Territory of Poland (in contrast to Belarus) also includes mountains, forest-steppes and steppes with specific aphid fauna. Nevertheless, comparison with the adjacent countries makes it possible to speculate that some 60–100 additional Macrosiphini species are likely to be found in Belarus.

Among the landscape provinces of Belarus (Fig. 2), the fauna of Macrosiphini has been best studied in Western Belarus. Data from Belarus Lakeland (Poozer'e) originate mainly from the Gorodock Highland (Rakauskas & Buga, 2010). In general, the number of recorded species reflects mostly collecting efforts rather than biogeographical differences between provinces.

In line with the global pattern of host plant use (Shaposhnikov, 1985), the majority of Macrosiphini species recorded in Belarus (Fig. 3) permanently inhabit herbaceous plants (monoecious species) or migrate to them from woody plants (dioecious species). Among the recorded species, 27 feed on a single host plant, 85 on hosts from one genus, 37 on hosts from one family, and only seven species use host plants from more than one family (Fig. 4).

The majority of recorded species have geographical distribution in the Palaeartic or Holarctic (Fig. 5). At least 16 species (10% of the local Macrosiphini fauna) expanded to Belarus with introduced plants or by invasion from adjacent areas. The probable origin of these alien species is suggested on the basis of geographical distribution of their host plants prior to human impact. Eleven of these species feed on introduced plants only (Table 1). A number of Macrosiphini species (such as Macrosiphoniella sanborni, Myzus ascalonicus, Myzus persicae, and Neomyzus circumflexum) cannot overwinter out of doors under the condition of Belarus. The introduction history is more or less documented for three species only. J. Holman (1971) discussed the distribution of Impatiens asiaticum briefly after it had been discovered in Europe and gave arguments for the hypothesis that its recent rapid spreading from Asia took place by means of aeroplanes. Brachycorynella lonicerina (feeding on aboriginal Lonicera xylosteum L.) has spread from the Ural and Volga regions during the 20th century (Vereshchagin et al., 1985). Acyrtosiphon caraganae (feeding on Caragana arborescens Lam. introduced from Central Asia) probably originated from the Altai (Mordvilko, 1914).
